

Latham's first Scottish site

JAMES LATHAM is to open a 40,000ft² distribution centre at the Eurocentral business park in Lanarkshire, its first in Scotland.

The site, due to open in April, will enable Lathams to "service existing, as well as new accounts, far more efficiently". The company said the facility will also provide daily deliveries, a collection facility and quicker order processing.

Products stocked include panel products, Flamebreak door-blanks, Bausen flooring, hardwood decking and a full range of hardwoods, including red species such as sapele and utile.

"[Lathams] is a highly respected brand both here in Scotland as well as south of the border," said David Landsburgh, site manager at the facility.

"The decision to open its first site outside England here in Lanarkshire reflects just how important this market is to us."

David Landsburgh, site manager (left), and Lathams director Andrew Wright